Second round of sampling data from Dimock attracts media flurry. The Philadelphia Inquirer, Scranton Times-Tribune, Associated Press and International Business Times were among the wide range of media contacting the press office for more details after the region issued a brief email notification to media outlets about the latest round of sampling results from homes in Dimock, Pa. The EPA email stated that EPA has completed and shared with residents and Pennsylvania state officials the second set of sampling at 20 private drinking water wells. This set of sampling did not show levels of contaminants that would give EPA reason to take immediate action. EPA remains committed to providing Dimock residents with the best available data and information on the quality of drinking water as expeditiously as possible. (Roy Seneca 814-5567)
